How Equifax & TransUnion Actually Score You

Before you can rebuild your credit, you need to understand the math behind it. Most Canadians waste years trying to fix their credit because they focus their energy on the wrong things.

Lenders rely heavily on automated systems to determine your creditworthiness. By understanding the exact breakdown of how your score is calculated, you can stop making blind guesses and start taking strategic actions that force your score to rise.

35%

Payment History: The heaviest factor. A single 30-day late payment can drop your score by up to 100 points. Consistency is mathematically everything.

30%

Credit Utilization: Maxed-out cards tank your score immediately. This measures how much of your available credit limits you are currently using.

15%

Credit Age: The average age of all your accounts. Never close your oldest credit card, even if you do not use it anymore.

10%

Credit Mix: Having only credit cards is seen as risky. Lenders want to see a mix of revolving credit and installment credit (like a car loan).

Three Strategies to Boost Your Score Today

You do not have to wait years to see your score improve. By executing these three targeted strategies, you can trigger a positive reporting cycle in as little as 30 days.

1 THE 30% UTILIZATION RULE

If you have a credit card with a $1,000 limit, never let the balance go above $300 (30%). If your cards are currently maxed out, your score is being artificially suppressed by the algorithm. Paying them down to below 30% will trigger an immediate, massive jump in your score the moment your monthly statement cuts.

2 SOFT PULLS VS. HARD PULLS

Every time a bank formally checks your credit to approve a loan, it records a "Hard Pull," which drops your score by 5 to 10 points. If you visit a traditional dealership, their finance office might blindly shotgun your application to 10 different banks at once, instantly causing 10 hard pulls and ruining your credit file. Always use an auto broker (like AutoBanker) who performs a single soft pull to evaluate your file without damage.

3 DISPUTE BUREAU ERRORS

Over 20% of Canadians have glaring errors on their Equifax or TransUnion reports. You might have late payments listed that you actually paid on time, or old collections that should have fallen off after 6 years. Order your free report directly from Equifax.ca and dispute any errors—they are legally required to remove them within 30 days if they
